Fire crews blasted for botched rescue

The daughters of Alison Hume say they will never forgive the senior fire chiefs who left their mother down a 50ft mine shaft for fear of breaching health and safety guidelines. The two sisters were speaking after Strathclyde Fire and Rescue was the subject of a damning verdict by a fatal accident inquiry which insisted it "should have saved" the life of the 44-year-old lawyer. "Left our mother to die"
